- A third of FTSE 100 annual reports leave investors with 'incomplete picture' of business performance and risk

<http://www.cimaglobal.com/About-us/Press-office/Press-releases/2016/A-third-of-FTSE-100-annual-reports-leave-investors-with-incomplete-picture-of-business-performance-and-risk/>

There have been several articles from Prem Sikka this quarter. Here is a selection of some of them:

- The liquidation of BHS, one of the UK's biggest retailers, is the story of predatory capitalism. BHS has been systematically stripped of assets, but deficit on the pension scheme has not been addressed. Present and past employees will now suffer and face massive cuts to their pension entitlements and will need to be supported by taxpayers.
<http://leftfootforward.org/2016/06/bhs-demise-shows-the-failure-of-predatory-capitalism/>
- The UK government is locked into a never-ending austerity program even though it has not delivered the promised economic growth, wage increases, higher productivity, lower public debt or stability. It is as though the government is engaged in a class war. The latest budget offers more of the same. I have a brief comment on it with the title "Budget 2016 demonstrates once again that austerity doesn't add up" and it is available here <http://leftfootforward.org/2016/03/budget-2016-demonstrates-once-again-that-austerity-doesnt-add-up/>
- Following the leak of Panama Papers, the UK government is promising to introduce laws to show that it is tough on tax avoidance. This kind of impression management posture is not new. How effective have previous promises been? I look at one of these efforts which in 2013 promised to prevent tax avoiders from securing taxpayer funded contracts. My article shows that to date no one has been barred from securing public contracts. The article is titled "Smoke and Mirrors: Government deliberately sidesteps effective tax avoidance strategies" and is available at

- BHS, one of the UK's biggest high street retailers, has collapsed today after over 80 years of business. So what happened - poor management, unable to compete, lack of investment. Probably all of these, but a major factor is that in recent years BHS has been used as a cash extraction machine to maximize shareholder wealth. The result, a calamity for employees, pension scheme members, supply chain workers, taxpayers and local communities. I have article on The Guardian website with the title "BHS is a victim of shareholder greed" and the subtitle says "Big corporations are seen as the private fiefdoms of investors. We need to protect workers and taxpayers". It is available at <http://www.theguardian.com/commentisfree/2016/apr/25/bhs-shareholder-greed-high-street-retailer-divident>
- As you know the UK is hosting the Anti-Corruption Summit and its Prime Minister is making all kind of claims about promoting corporate transparency. This article provides counter evidence to show that in order to appease corporations and wealthy elites the UK has continued to promote practices which make it very difficult, if not impossible, to know the shareholders and directors of companies. The article is titled "How serious is David Cameron about tackling corruption?" and is available at <http://leftfootforward.org/2016/05/how-serious-is-david-cameron-about-tackling-corruption/>
- As many of you know UK Parliamentary Committees (Work and Pensions Committee, and Business Innovation and Skills Committee) are investigating the demise of BHS, one of the UK's biggest retailers. My initial report to the Committees has now been released and is available here. Further reports will be submitted as it would be the Committees' may release them.
<http://data.parliament.uk/writtenevidence/committeeevidence.svc/evidencedocument/work-and-pensions-committee/pension-protection-fund-and-the-pensions-regulator/written/33700.html>
A key lesson from the scandal is that we need to change the way corporations are governed and the article titled "The BHS scandal shows that we need workers on boards" makes a case for it and is available here
<http://leftfootforward.org/2016/05/the-bhs-scandal-shows-that-we-need-workers-on-boards/>
